Elements of Trafficking Persons

1. The person is subjected to one of the following acts:
   - forcing, compelling, or inducing a person to engage in sex trafficking of persons;
   - engaging in a scheme or attempt to engage in sex trafficking of persons;
   - selling, providing, giving, obtaining, obtaining, furnishing, or delivering a person for the purpose of engaging in sex trafficking of persons;
   - compelled or induced to commit one or more sex trafficking offenses.

2. The activity is committed by one of the following means:
   - Force, fraud, or coercion.
   - Compulsion, duress, or deception.
   - Hurt, pain, or suffering.
   - Other means.

Any act of trafficking in persons has been done to a child under the age of 18 by any of the aforementioned means. If any of the seven acts constituting a child trafficking in persons occurs, the child is a trafficking victim or a victim of trafficking in persons.

3. The victim or potential victim is subjected to the following acts:
   - Seeking benefits from the prostitution (proceeds from prostitution, proceeds from victimization, or proceeds from an act);
   - Protection from the violence (protection from violence, protection from victimization, or protection from an act);
   - Education (education for victims of trafficking in persons);
   - Rehabilitation (rehabilitation for victims of trafficking in persons);
   - Medical care (medical care for victims of trafficking in persons);
   - Psychological care (psychological care for victims of trafficking in persons);
   - Social services (social services for victims of trafficking in persons).

4. If any act of trafficking in persons has been done to a child under the age of 18 by any of the aforementioned means, the victim or potential victim of the child is a trafficking victim or a victim of trafficking in persons.

5. If any act of trafficking in persons has been done to a child under the age of 18 by any of the aforementioned means, the child is a trafficking victim or a victim of trafficking in persons.
